Washington Letter.

(From our regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Jan 1,'85

The coug d'etat of the present Apministration has been the Nicaraguan treaty. No subject for a long time has excited such interest among politicians and officials at Washington, At the Capitol, through the lobbies, and about the hotels one hears little else now but this Nicaraguan question. As the matter comes to be fully comprehended it opens up possibilities that are startling. It not only means a liberal construction of the theory of our Government relating to foreign occupation of any territory on this continent, as enunciated by President Monroe, but the acquisition of territory more than a thousand miles from our southern border and the maintenance of a free ship-canal, and the construction of powerful forts and their occupation by garrisons sufficiently strong to hold the territory acquired and enforce our canal regulations against any foreign power. The scheme has all the essential attributes of Mr. Blaine's plan of an imperial republic that is, a republic the southernmost boundary of which would be under the Equator-the most andacious as it was the most dazzling scheme of our time. With a view to finding just how this matter appeared to others, and in particular to the Army, Navy, and the best political thinkers, I interviewed persons who are representative men of the class mentioned. "It will be a great thing for both the Army and Navy." said an officer of high rank, a member of the Swaan court-martial now sitting in Washington, " and for the following reason: Two strong forts will be required, one at each end of the canal, and perhaps a third midway between the two. These will need to be of the best modern type known to military engineering science, otherwise they would be perfectly useless, and a special garrison of not less than three thousand to the digestive and urmary organs, it allos men, perhaps more, will be needed to properly man them. You see, this action of the President and his Secretary of State is a pretty sudacious piece of business. We have notified all the world that we intend to control the inter-oceanic canal route, build it ourselves, and regulate the passage of commerce and war-ships through it, as we may see proper. This means a great deal when you come to think about it. To England it is a notice that this found m self growing wors . A friend told ne Government will open and keep under its own control a line of communication 10,000 miles nearer to the British colonies in the Pacific than any existing route. But don't misunderstand me. I am for the canal. We need something to strengthening medicine." stir up the military spirit of the nation, which the all-pervading anxiety among our people to get money has somewhat stopped, and this would do it. We are very rich, and very weak. The President has done a wise thing, and we cannot go back on him now."

naval officer who was a prominent participant in one of the most famous engagements of our late war, and to him I put very much the same questions as were propounded to the military commander. "Nothing since the Virginius affair has created such a lively sensation in our service as has this Nicaraguan treaty," said he, " and I don't see how either branch of Congress can disregard it. The President has put us into deep water before we knew it. If we fail to ratify this treaty all Europe will understand that we were simply afraid to do it, and a pleasant position that would be! If we do ratify it, then we must get ready to maintain our pretensions in the Carribean sea by something more than talk."

"I think this Nicaraguan treaty will he ratified by the Senate," said a Democratic Senator vi h whom I next talked, "We have talked it over somewhat and the general opinion is that we will do well for the country, and our party too, to stand by the President. Unless this nation is weaker and meaner than I am willing to believe it is, Congress will ratify that treaty.'

Mrs. Mc Elroy is expected at the White House the day after Christmas. She will be the guest of the President during the social season, and will doubtless perform her duties to society in the same agreeable manner as on previous occasions.

The President proposes to eat his Christmas dinner and spend the day very quietly at the White House. He will probably receive a good'y supply of canes, umbrellas, cases of wine, an qoxes of cigars, unless his frie ids think less of him now than they did one year ago. I hardly believe he would be ofended if , he should, upon awaking Christmas morning, find in his stocking the assurance from a majority of the Republicans in the New York legislature that he shall have the

TAKING A DRINK OF LIQUOR IS A PHYSICAL IMPOSSIBILITY.

Drunkenness is a disease, not a weakness. Primarily the appetite for alcoholic drinks must be cultivated; but when the appetite is once formed, it is as much a disease as any other affliction for which medicine is administered. Every nerve, tissue and pore of the body is but a famished wolf with a million months grawing upon the system and craving for alcohol. Pledges, temperance lectures, "dreadful examples," prayers, resolutions—all are futile. Not one man in a thousand can withstand the battle; not because he has not the desire, but because he is physically weak. He could as easily abstain from eating food after a familine with a banquet at his hand, as to deny his hungry system in its awful craving to liquor.

THE SPECIFIC AND LIQUOR CAN NOT EXIST IN THE SYSTEM TOGETHER. It would be amusing, were it not pitiful, to watch the man to whom the Specific has been given without his knowledge. At first, out of habit, and not realizing that the good work has begun, he pours out his drink. He swallows it and shudders. The next attempt, he raises the liquor to his lips, gets its odor in his nestrits, and sets the glass down, usually with the remark that "somehow, I am not whistly hungry." From this moment he is saved. No effectively prostration, no "lim-jams," no ill-effects will appear - the man is no more a drunkard that the child who never knew the taste of liquor.
